

Company Information

Randolph Packing Company was founded in 1928 by Angelo Carmignani, in Chicago's famed Fulton Market district on Randolph and Sangamon Streets. His vision of manufacturing authentic Old World Style ethnic sausage, in the tradition of his sausage making ancestors in Italy, continues today.

Today, his son, Angelo Wayne Carmignani, owns Randolph Packing Company. The original facility and two additional manufacturing locations have been relocated into a 63,000 square foot state of the art manufacturing facility in Streamwood, IL. Here, the "Old-World Style" manufacturing philosophy continues today:

- Blending fresh, never frozen, pork or beef cuts to achieve desired fat to lean ratios, depending on individual product specifications.
- Offering taste profiles developed for regional preferences.
- Offering a variety of packaging or freezing techniques designed to improve shelf life and product stability.
- Consistently offering our customers a quality product to match their marketing needs.

Randolph Packing Company's commitment to quality is displayed in it's state of the art facility, literally a plant within a plant. The sausage manufacturing is conducted totally under refrigeration in an insulated enclosed building within the facility. All product is manufactured fresh daily. Retail product can be shipped fresh or frozen, while all food service product is frozen and shipped within five to ten days. Strict sanitation and quality control programs are maintained.

Randolph Packing Company is a Federally inspected USDA facility. All HACCP and strict second party sanitation audit procedures are met.

Randolph Packing Company considers all its products to be unique because of the personal way in which they are manufactured.

Randolph Packing Company distributes a high quality line of fresh and frozen, "Old-World Style" ethnic sausage, specialty sausage and sausage related products, (including meatballs, toppings and Spanish style favorites) to the retail and food service industries.

Randolph Packing offers private label programs developed especially to suite the needs of multi-unit food service organizations and retail chains. Our nationally recognized proprietary labeled products ("Randolph Brand", "Randolph Market", and "Porky's Last Stand") are currently available, supported with extensive merchandising programs.
